Lisa Gamblin with Versarys Investment (Aunre) wishing everyone a great show season!

President's Letter

As the ECPJ passes and the Show Season begins to wind down, we once again look back and say....WOW what a great bunch we have here in Indiana." For those of you that have attended either one of our shows (and don't forget we STILL) have one more Sept, 7th and 8th, you know that it takes an Army to put it all on.

Therefore, I again extend a big and hearty thanks to all that have stepped up to help in any way. Of course, Barb, Joe, Val, Wyneta, Annette, Rex, Jamie, Don, Jim, Dustin, Ian and crew, all of you know who you are, without your help we'd be "just another club".

The ECPJ attracted several new faces and from what I have heard, every one of them has said how friendly and helpful our group is. That in itself speaks volumes for us as a whole. We only have one opportunity to make a good first impression which is exactly what we do. The attendance was good, with a fantastic group of horses, ponies and minis. Competition was always down to the wire, representing the quality of horses we have here in our area. I encourage you all to invite your "horse" friends to our next show and general meeting. It never hurts to explain or show them just how horse shows SHOULD run, we are the last group of people I know in this endeavor to entertain any sort of drama!

The highlight of the show for me, naturally, was the "formal" day we Mini girls decided to do. I'm not sure if we looked like 80's Prom Queen rejects, or Princesses from a Disney movie? Either way, we girls sure enjoyed ourselves and for those that saw us parading around we gave them a show. Pictures will be posted!

Speaking of Pictures...I have yet to hear anything but rave reviews for Cassie and her father, Bart from Photos by C n M. The pictures, now posted on line, are fantastic. Check them out, photosbycnm.zerfolio.com, Cassie's number is (260) 223-1737. She has indicated she is capable of changing backgrounds, ears, or just about anything you'd like done to enhance the picture. Remember, if we do not support the photographers we will have NO ONE coming to our shows. They too, have to make some sort of profit for it to be beneficial for them to come. Please consider a purchase.

Wanted to also mention that the Year End High Point standings for the National club is posted very quickly. I have seen that in several divisions our Indiana horses, ponies and minis are right up there. We are letting the nation know that we have the quality to compete against. Therefore I'd like to acknowledge those of you that have worked so hard this season to be one of those "in the hunt". We also have several members that have received ROM's, ROE's, Pinto Championships, Achievement and Ability Awards. It does not go unnoticed how much effort it takes to obtain these awards, so congrats and yippee to all of you.

Finally, remember our Meeting, following the Carry-In dinner at the next show in New Castle. It is now time to begin thinking of things you'd like to chat about, change or mention at that meeting. Most importantly please keep in mind that this is my last year as President. I have certainly enjoyed representing this club and will of course continue to do so, but we need to think about who you'd like to see in this office, as well as several other openings that will be voted on at the Banquet. I encourage you to volunteer your time and thoughts. We need new ideas to grow as a club, those ideas come from new and fresh faces, as well as those of you that have been members forever.

Keep in your prayers those of our group in health, financial, or any other needs. As always....this is YOUR club, so please send in your concerns or questions, I assure you someone will address them.

See you at the next show,

Cheryl Ann Kratzert-Walls – President IPtHA

My fellow mini girls and I.

Unfailing devotion and service

Lisa Gamblin is very well known and loved within the horse community of Lake County. She is the mounted posse unit leader within the sheriff's department.

The non-profit volunteer organization currently has nine horses and 11 posse members, all of whom are official sheriff's deputies. In addition, nine auxiliary members assist in a variety of situations, including crowd control.

In the event of a major emergency, natural disaster or other critical event, the mounted posse stands ready to handle or assist in whatever the sheriff's office deems necessary. "And, as far as our search and rescue efforts," said Gamblin, "... there's so much a deputy on horseback can do that can't be done with four-wheelers or other vehicles."

It's a requirement each posse member care for and train his or her own horse. After all the time, hard work and patience during that training process, incredibly strong, loving bonds and trust are established. "Unlike humans with a 'fight or flight' response to danger or stress, a horse," Gamblin explains, "is generally a 'fright and flight' animal." It's not normal to stand his or her ground when scared, so they must be taught not to be skittish. During posse training, horse and rider may be exposed to the sounds of loud machinery or noisy equipment. They learn to cross bridges, go on trail rides, not be afraid of dogs and avoid obstacles. And, the beautiful creatures are taught not to move while being approached, stroked and affectionately pet by strangers.

The beloved posse makes appearances at annual charity events and fundraisers including 4-H club affairs, Lake County Animal Control October Fest, and the Horsing Around Clinic at Lake County Fairgrounds.

And, much to the delight of thousands of bystanders, the posse teams march in parade celebrations during the Fourth of July, Labor Day, Memorial Day, Mexican Independence Day and Veterans Day. The horses and riders are even called upon to do perimeter security and assist with parking detail during activities at the Lake County Fairgrounds. "But," said Gamblin, "our posse is also called upon to serve as the honor guard in very sad and somber events such as funeral processions and tributes to fallen officers."

"We are proud of our very professional Lake County Sheriff's Department's Posse unit," said Sheriff John Buncich. "In addition," he added, "the posse members provide an invaluable service by tending to injured and or neglected horses."

That's where the Lake County Sheriff Animal Control and Adoption Center comes into play. Deborah Mandich-Nowland is its director. When the center gets a report of an abused horse, or one that is hurt, ill, malnourished, doesn't have proper shelter, has no water or is tied to a tree, is abandoned or otherwise inhumanely treated, she immediately contacts Gamblin and her posse. "Lisa goes to the location, evaluates the situation and makes decisions," said Nowland. Then, the horse can be transported, boarded, rehabbed and relocated to a new forever home.

"When it comes to horses in our county, we just couldn't operate without our mounted posse. Lisa and her unit are incredibly dedicated volunteers with a tremendous amount of knowledge, talent, love and passion for the animals."

Lameness Evaluation

Article courtesy of Conley and Koontz Equine Hospital

Lameness is a very complex and important area of equine veterinary medicine. There have been many advances in medicine in how we diagnose and treat lameness. Even with all these new tools, lameness in the horse often goes undiagnosed or underdiagnosed, particularly with respect to soft tissue injuries. Without a proper diagnosis, the ideal treatment and rehabilitation plan cannot be developed for your horse. An incomplete diagnosis can put your horse at risk for unnecessary treatments and expense, incomplete healing, and a greater risk of re-injury in the future.

For example, while joint injections are an appropriate and beneficial treatment therapy in some cases, joints are frequently injected in performance horses without a full diagnostic workup. There is a growing concern among equine veterinarians that we may potentially cause injuries to soft tissues in these horses by constantly injecting their joints without identifying the basis of the lameness. Joint injections always carry a small risk of infection, which can be life threatening. Frequent, chronic use of steroids in a joint can lead to cartilage degeneration and permanent osteoarthritis. Injecting steroids into a joint that has an undiagnosed associated soft tissue injury can actually interfere with healing. Also, the steroids will decrease pain and inflammation, so the horse will feel better in the short term and go back to work. If the horse has a soft tissue injury, they will then be more likely to re-injure the area or have a severe, catastrophic injury. While you may see short term benefits from the steroids, unless medically indicated, they may be detrimental to your horse's future soundness in the long term. While it can be time consuming, allowing your veterinarian to do a complete lameness workup is in your horse's best interests.

Lameness Workup:

Lameness workups may include a thorough exam, flexion tests, diagnostic nerve blocks, and intra-articular anesthesia. These help the veterinarian to localize where the lameness is originating and potentially what structures are involved.

A lameness exam usually begins with a visual evaluation of the horse. Your veterinarian will watch the horse move, usually at the trot, to discern the general location of lameness. They may also ask you to lunge or ride the horse. They will also look for heat, pain, or swelling by thoroughly examining and palpating the affected leg and joints. Hoof testers may be applied if indicated.

Flexion tests are when specific joints are put under stress by flexing them for a short period of time and then immediately trotting the horse. When the horse trots off, if the pain originates from that joint, the lameness may be exacerbated for a short period of time after being stressed.

Diagnostic nerve blocks are when the nerves that supply sensation to the leg are blocked with a small amount of local anesthetic. Any pain originating from the area can no longer be felt by the horse, so the lameness will improve once the correct area has been blocked. Often multiple nerve blocks must be performed, moving up the leg sequentially, to localize the area where the pain is originating from on the leg.

Intra-articular anesthesia is similar to nerve blocks, except the local anesthetic is injected into a joint. If the joint is the cause of the lameness, the lameness should improve after being blocked.

Diagnostic Imaging:

Diagnostic imaging is the next step and allows us to actually look at the structural integrity of the bones, ligaments, and tendons in the leg and determine the location, type, and severity of the injury. Images can be saved and compared to assess progress in healing throughout the rehabilitation process. Radiography and ultrasonography are the most common types of imaging.

Radiography is taking radiographs or "X-rays". These allow us to look primarily at the bones, especially around joints, in the leg. Your veterinarian can see more obvious lesions, such as fractures, but also more subtle changes in the bone, such as early osteoarthritis or changes in bone density indicating that the bone is remodeling due to stress. Radiographs do not show soft tissue structures well, so ultrasound is used for these structures.

Ultrasonography sends ultrasonic sound waves through the tissue and the machine is able to interpret the returning waves to give us an image of the tissues of the leg. Ultrasound is used primarily for soft tissue structures, such as ligaments and tendons, as the sound waves cannot penetrate bone. Most frequently, strains and tears in the ligaments and tendons are diagnosed on ultrasound. It can also be used to assess the capsule, synovium, and fluid quality in joints and tendon sheaths.

Many people opt to skip nerve blocks and diagnostic imaging and go straight to treatment. For example, your horse is lame and seemed a little painful when their fetlock was flexed, so the temptation is to just inject the fetlock joint. First, let's consider all the structures in this area. There is the cannon bone, long pastern bone, two sesamoid bones, fetlock joint, digital tendon sheath, extensor tendon, superficial digital flexor tendon, deep digital flexor tendon, suspensory branches, collateral ligaments, and distal sesamoidian ligaments. Any of these structures could be causing lameness and they have very different treatment plans and rehabilitation schedules. The first step toward healing is to accurately identify an injury.

Treatment:

Once the lesion is identified, the goal of treatment and rehabilitation is to maximize healing to the extent that normal athletic activity can be resumed without re-injury. Your veterinarian may also schedule regular rechecks of the injury during the healing process. When we have not identified the cause of lameness, we frequently use a very vague rest and rehabilitation schedule. It has been demonstrated that horses undergoing a few months of stall rest followed by pasture turnout alone resulted in only 22-26% of horses returning to work for one year without re-injury. With identification of the lesion, we can structure a rest and rehabilitation program specific for the type of injury and athletic purpose of your horse.

A good way to remember the minimum time of the rest and rehabilitation program should be is to use number of letters in the words BONE, TENDON, and LIGAMENT. If the injury is bone, we rest and rehabilitate for 4 months. If the injury is tendon, we rest and rehabilitate for 6 months. If the injury is ligament, we rest and rehabilitate for 8 months. While your horse may no longer be lame after just a few months, a tendon or ligament will take much longer to completely heal. It is tempting to begin riding your horse early, but being patient and allowing your horse to complete the full rehabilitation schedule will be better in the long run. The overall prognosis for return to work without re-injury after a successful completion of a controlled exercise rest and rehabilitation program has been reported to be as good as 85%. Follow this link to view or download our recommended Rehabilitation Schedule for common tendon or ligament injuries.

Lastly, please consider what happens in human athletes. I asked an orthopedic surgeon in Indianapolis once why he did so many cruciate repairs in college and professional athletes and his response was quick. He said, "We don't give the minor injuries enough time to heal!" He went on to explain that too often, we strain and injure soft tissue structures, but because they are not catastrophic we continue to exercise and perform at high levels. We patch them up with drugs and different therapies, but we don't give them adequate time to heal. Eventually though, they become a catastrophic injury, that can be career ending or at least very expensive and time consuming to treat. This is what happens to our equine athletes. Just because a lameness may be subtle or responsive to minimal amounts of nonsteroidal anti-inflammatories, does not mean it is insignificant. Ignoring it and continue to work the horse can cause further damage or lead to a catastrophic injury that can keep you out of the saddle for a year or more. As a surgeon and sports medicine specialist, my specialties are identifying the root of the problem, treating the root of the problem, and rehabilitating the patient to give it its best chance for return to full athletic function.

So the next time your horse is lame, consider taking a few hours and letting our veterinarians work to diagnose the cause of lameness. It might be something as subtle ligament strain, but it could be something as catastrophic as a ligament tear. We have the resources and the knowledge to give your horse the best opportunity to have a successful return to athletic function for a very long time.
